that assists single mothers with job skills. He also wants to start an initiative to help young adults learn a trade and find a comparable job.

Another effort he is working on is taping an open dialogue session between the youth and the elderly about the problems in society. He plans to videotape the roundtable discussion and have the program aired on television.

"All kids are looking for is a little TLC - tender loving care," Robinson said.

As the organization's waiting list gets longer, there's always a need for more funding and more volunteers.

"We have a waiting list of over 100 children," Robinson said.

He hopes to recruit volunteers from St. Aug's, Shaw, NC State, and Peace and Meredith colleges, but anyone can participate.

The GBO will have a fish and barbecue chicken plate fund-raiser July 15 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Southgate Shopping Center off Rock Quarry Road. On Aug. 13, the group will sponsor family day. Members of the Raleigh police and fire department have been invited to play flag football.

"It will be a big community day," Robinson said. "We just want to let people know that we are an organization that is really trying to do something."
